Address THE YPSILANTIAN, Ypsilanti, Mich More Buildings.—John Norton is commencing two five-room cottages on his lot at the corner of Hamilton and Florence streets.

-Mrs. Arnold is adding an upright part to her house on the corner of Adams and Florence, and placing the old part upon a higher foundation.

-T. C. Owen is sending his tank house one story nearer the zenith, and it bids fair soon to be the tallest building in the state.

BURGLARIOUS ATTMPTS.—Mr. A. A. Be dell last night came near being the vic tim of burglars. The attempt to enter his store was made at a window in the rear through which some time since the store was entered and plundered. The outlaws broke off the heavy blinds and began to remove a light of glass but the indications are that they were frightened away as they did not succeed in getting in. An electrical trap ought to be set for such chaps and it would not be the strang est thing in the world, if some dark night, some one on mischief bent, should ex perience a surprise and a cure of all burg larious instincts.

THE CROCUS.—This charming little flower delights us perhaps more than any other, because it is the very first to greet us in the spring. Almost before the snow is gone, sometimes, its yellow, purple, or pure white bloom bursts from the ground to tell us the winter is past. We noticed ome of them in Mrs. Oberst's door yard last Saturday. The autumn crocus has the singular habit of flowering after the leaves have matured and disappeared, the long, white flower tube rising from the earth, like a spirit of a dead plant coming out of its grave. The crocus belongs to the iris family, which includes the gladiolus, and the dainty blue-eyed grass with its white

THE RESULT OF WHISKY.—Last Friday young man named Thomas A. Dignan whose father is an industrious and worthy resident of this city, stepped off the cars at the depot with more whisky on board than is conducive to the peace of community, and forthwith became involved in a controversy with John McCauley who chanced to be near. The result was John came off with a badly damaged eye, it having come into collision with a stone from the hand of said Dignan. From the generosity of his heart, John refused to enter complaint, and the young man was arrested for drunkenness and disor derly conduct. After examination he was fined five dollars and costs. The amount was paid and the young man left town for the public good.

A NEW CEMETERY.—Father DeBever has secured for St. John's Catholic parish fourteen acres on the corner of River street and the north line of the township, for a new cemetery. The ground cost $1200, and is hilly and well suited to the purpose. The situation is east of the north limit of Highland Cemetery, and immediately south of the old Superior cemetery. The need of a new cemetery for the parish has been manifest for some time. No suitable lots remain unoccupied in the present one, and its location, practically within the city, is one that never should have been selected, and it ought not longer to be used. The new ground will be far superior to it in beauty of location and surface, and will be susceptible of improvement not possible for the old.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—Dr. McCorkle and D. B. Greene are at Pontiac, this week, in attendance upon the annual session of the Presbytery of Detroit. -The annual conference of the Evangelical Association, held at Howell last week, appointed the Rev. F. Kehler pastor to Ypsilanti. The Evangelical Association is a Methodist body among the Germans in America, originating in Pennsylvania about ninety years ago, and popularly known at the East as "Albrights," from Rev. Jacob Albright, the founder There are a few persons here who have been identified with the body, but there is no organized society, as yet. The Ypsilanti Circuit embraces the church at Whit-

Mr. Ansel Williams, who with his wife has spentmost of the winter in the which he collected while on his extensive travels through California and Oregon and the country this side. His experiences have given him enlarged views of the magnitude and possibilities of our country, and it is a delight to spend an hour with him when he is in a communicative mood, and listen to the narrative he gives. It was his fortune to occupy the same car which bore General Fremont and family on their western journey. He represents the General as our youthful mind pictured him when he was the standard bearer of the republican party in 1856, only older and of somewhat stouter habit. Notwithstanding thirty years and more have passed over him since then, and eventful years at that, he is still vigorous and active, interested in passing events and alive to the great interests and future possibilities of his country. In passing through Arizona, intelligence went ahead of the train, of his coming, and crowds gathered at the stations with a view to catch a glimpse of the old and earliest hero of western exploration. Rough men from the mountains, clad in cowboy's garb, would rush into the car and greet the old man with true western heartiness, and their greetings were returned invariably with the true gentlemanly cordiality which has always been so characteristic of his intercourse with men. The accomplished Jessie whom the General stole away from the Benton mansion, to make her his wife, and who in '56 was often the burden and inspiration of the campaign songs, was with him, still vigorous, and as bright, intelligent and spirited as we were taught she was in the campaign which first brought her name prominently before the country. Mr. Williams visited nearly all the western states, and found much to admire and some things of less attractive

Incidents of Travel.

A Farm Without Mortgage. Henry Newton, a prosperous farmer of Canton township, smiles audibly when he reads the free trade screeds on farm mortgages in Michigan. He can tell these would be philosophers a story that would make them "awfully tired;" how he started as a poor boy somewhere about 1859 and by industry and sobriety, had laid aside in 1863, $900 with which he bought 40 acres of land and gave a mortgage upon it for $900 paying the other 20 cents. $900 out of his savings. Keeping on the even tenor of his way, he has succeeded so far that now he is possessed of 200 seres of as fine land as is found in Wayne Everybody may see him at the Opera county, all well fenced and improved, with and barns which any man might reasonably covet, with stock and farm tools of first class and not a dollar of mortgage claim upon it. He has about him, a fine family consisting of three boys and one girl, and is in every way comfortable and happy. Besides all this, he has paid the doctors over $1000-and has no complaint to make. Mr. Newton is not the only one who "has gone and done likewise." The country is full of them. So far as we know, is an advocate of protection and a home market. Would any one like to learn more about the farm mortgages, let him ask those who invested in Bohemian oats and Red Line wheat, etc. and they will pour into his ears a tale of woe such as will make him forget for the time his free trade effusions and so,

Miss Morse sang well, though suffering from a cold. As an encore to the beautiful solo from "Tannhauser," Mr. Lee sang "Don't Be Sorrowful, Darling," with exquisite feeling and perfect yet easy enunciation. The charming "Maraguita" was most delightfully sung by Mr. Spiga-

Miss Kellogg's voice was not at its best in the Polonaise from Mignon; but was Agitation is a purifying agent, and when fine in the duet with Miss Morse, and grand in the last scene. If Kellogg would cultivate repose of manner her audiences would be thankful. The duet, "Deh vanni," from "La Favorita" was very sweet. The Quartette Scene from "Rigolette" is said to be the best music Verdi ever wrote. It was beautifully sung, but the acting was somewhat stiff. In this scene Miss Kellogg disclosed the great power and beauty of her voice. Though she may be past her prime, it is privilege to hear her even now.

The dresses with one exception were charming. Miss Morse wore an exquisite gown of pale blue silk and white and gold procade, and Miss Kellogg wore what the fashion writers call a "poem" of pale shrimp pink crepe and silver-olive green silk, the exquisite drapery of which was caught up by sprays of old-red poppies and green leawes.

We see on exhibition an elegant and lifelike portrait of Dr. Bonsteel in the window of Mrs. Martin's millinary store, also a fine one of Mr. G. L. The cost of lighting the city including the township and a part of Superior for three months (69 nights) with electricity till 12:30 a.m. was $513.38." Ypsilanti and Superior townships are understood to be perfectly satisfied, and certainly the city ought to be pleased.

> The Woman's Club will meet with Mrs. John Taylor, Tuesday afternoon, April 17. The meeting held Saturday night in the opera house, under the auspices of the Prohibition Club, was one which everybody present seemed to enjoy. The singing by the Silver Lake Quartette was of high order and afforded the audience a rare treat. The voices were full and rich, while the little by-play of !the performers added an amusing feature. They sang "with the spirit and with the understanding." Prof. A. A. Hopkins who was announced to speak was unable to appear be cause of an attack of pneumonia, so Rev. Rev, W. Whistler, of Hastings, England, gave it out that he had made up his mind to be buried in a coffin made from an oak of his own planting. He planted the oak, and it grew into a stately tree, but for some reason it sud-"up and died" long before Mr. Whistler was ready, and he was forced to give up his pet scheme.

Previous to the death of Mrs. Esther Potter, of Burlington, Me., she prayed that her seventeen-months-old baby might die with her. The child, who but an hour or two before was as well as usual, playing about the room, immediately after receiving a kiss from its dying mother closed its eyes, and in five minutes or less was dead.

Who would think of calling deaf men by beating a drum? Yet this is exactly what is done in the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb at Flint, Mich. With the drum resting on the floor and beaten in the usual way, everybody in the building is awakened in the morning. It is also used to eall the boys from the playgrounds. The teachers state that those who cannot hear at all feel the vibrations and answer the sum-

A family living on Butte Creek, Oregon, is very superstitious. All seem to be possessed of the idea that the devil is after them. This is bad enough, but lately they have taken to hunting his satanic majesty with shotguns, and their neighbors object. Several persons have been fired upon while riding along the road about their own business, and very naturally they dislike being mistaken for the old Nick or his imps.

There is a mule on the Hudson Canal who knows every inch of the route from Eddyville, N. Y., to Honesdale, He has been thrown into the canal innumerable times, but has always escaped by swimming. It is said also that he can untie a knot in a canal rope as well as his driver.

Inspector Byrnes, of the New York police, states that a number of our noted cracksmen have of late been reaping a golden harvest across the Two well-known thieves he says, recently went through England, France and Belgium and returned with nearly $100,000 in cash. He asserts that the business is laid out for them before they go across, and that being unknown to the European police, they run over and do their work and get away before detection can be had.

M. Perrotin, astronomer of Nice, corroborates the Italian Schiaparelli's announcement of the existence of what seem to be canals on the planet Mars. He has mapped and measured these great works, most of which lie in the equatorial regions of the planet; and, supposing the diameter of Mars to be, as is generally believed, about 4,200 miles at the equator, some of these canals are, he says, nearly 2,000 miles long. M. Herrotin has, moreover, gone far toward establishing that the planet really has an atmosphere not very different from that to which we are accustomed.

A venerable Englishman named Heaps, a maker of violins, had a patriotic desire to make a violin for Mr. Gladstone out of the wood from a tree chopped by the ex-Premier's own hands. After considerable effort Mr. Heaper was invited to Hawarden to select the tree for Mr. Gladstone to fell. A sycamore was chosen, and a log big enough to make a dozen instuments was forwarded to the maker's house. The old man at once began his labor of love, and a lot of wood was cut and dried. But the aged man was stricken down before he completed the preliminary work. His dving wish was that the last violin he had constructed should be sent to Mr.

EASTER-DAY LILIES.

Dr. Talmage Discourses to an Immense Audience on the Great Democracy of Flowers.

The Lily, in Its Conquest with the Rose, Crowned Queen of Bible Favorites.

The platform and galleries of the Taber- city as there are convoys coming nacle were Easter morning profusely decor- heaven to earth; and if there be instaated with flowers. On the previous evening the church had been opened to prepare the decorations, for which the congregation had been invited to bring flowers.

The immense audience-room is not large enough to contain the people on ordinary ocasions; it must be left to the imagination to uggest the throngs, both inside and outside he church, on this great festal day. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., took for his text:

"If then God so clothe the grass, which is to day n the field, and to morrow is cast into the oven, ow much more will he clothe you."—Luke xii, 23. He said:

The lily is the queen of bible flowers. The rose may have disputed her throne in addern times and won it, but the rose original. ally had only five petals. It was under the ong-continued and intense gaze of the world hat the rose blushed into its present beauty. In the bibe train cassia and hyssop and frank-neense and myrrh and spikenard and cam-blire and the rose follow the lily. Four-teen times in the bible is the lily mentioned, only twice the rose. The rose may now have vider empire, but the lily reigned in the ime of Esther, in the time of Solomon, in the time of Christ.

Cæsar had his throne on the hills. The lily nad her thorne in the valley. In the greatest sermon that was ever preached there was ever preached there was ever preached there was that ally. The Bedford dreamer, John Bunyan, entered the house of the interpreter and was shown a cluster of flowers, and was told to "consider the lilies."

We may study or reject other sciences at ur option. It is so with astronomy, it is so with chemistry, it is so with jurisprudence, with chemistry, it is so with jurisprudence, it is so with geology; but the science of botany Christ commands us to study when He says: "Consider the lilies," Measure them from roos to tip of petal, Inhale their breath. Notice the gracefulness of their poise. Hear the whisper of the white lips of the eastern and of the red lips of the American lily.

Belonging to this royal family of lilies is the lily of the Nile, the Japan lily, the Lady Washington of the Sierras, the Golden Band lily, the Giant lily of Nepaul, the Turk's Cap lily, the African lily from the Cape of Good Hope. All these lilies have the royal blood in their veins. But I take the lilies of my text this morning as typical of all flowers, and this Easter day, garlanded with all this opulence of floral beauty, seems vith all this opulence of floral beauty, seems consider the azalias, consider the fuchsias, consider the geraniums, consider the ivies. consider the hyacinths, consider the heliotropes, consider the oleanders." With differential and grateful and intelligent and worshipful souls, consider them. Not with insipid sentimentarism, or with sophomoric vaporing, but for grand and practical and everyday, and, if need be, homely uses, consider them.

The flowers are the angels of the grass.

The flowers are the angels of the grass. They all have voices. When the clouds speak, they thunder; when the whirlwinds speak, they scream; when the cataracts speak, they roar; but when the flowers road. speak, they roar; but when the flowers speak, they whasper. I stand here to interpret their message. What have you to say, O, ye angels of the grass, to this worshipful multitude?

This morning I mean to discuss what flowers are good for. That is my subject: what are flowers good for?

1. I remark, in the first place, they are 1. I remark, in the light place, they are good for lessons of God's providential care. That was Christ's first thought. All these flowers seem to address us to-day, saying: "God will give you appared and tood. We have no wheel with which to spin no loom with which to wave, no sickle with which to harvest, no well sweep with which to draw water; but God slikes our thirst with the draw and God foods as with the bread of draw water; but God slakes our thrist with the dew, and God feeds us with the bread of the sunshine, and God has appareled us with more than Solomonic regulity. We are pro-phetesses of adequate wardrobe. If God so clothed us, the grass of the field, will He not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?" Men and women of worldly anxieties, take this message home with you. How long has God taken care of you? Quarter of the jour-ney of life? half the journey of life? Can three quarters of the journey of life?

11. If you insist on asking me the question, What are the flowers good for? I respond they are good for the bridal day. The bride must have them on her brow, and she must have them in her hand. The marriage altar must be covered with them. A wedding without flowers would be as inappropriate as a wedding without music. At such a time they are for congratulation and prophecies of So much of the pathway of life is covered up with thorns we ought to cover the beginning with orange blossoms.

Flowers are appropriate on such occasions, for in ninety-nine out of a hundred cases it is the very best thing that could have happenit an inaptitude, and may lift its eyebrows in surprise and think it might suggest some-thing better, but the God who sees the twenthy, forty, fifty years of wedded life before they have begun arranges all for the best. So that flowers, in almost all cases, are ap-propriate for the marriage day. The diver-gences of disposition will become corre-spondences, recklessness will become prudnce, frivolity will be turned into practical-tty.

There has been many an aged widowed soul who had a carefully locked bureau, and in the bureau a box, and in the box a folded paper, and in the folded paper a half-blown rose, slightly tragrant, discolored, carefully pressed. She put it there forty or fitty years ago. On the anniversary day of her wedding she will go to the bureau, she will lift the she will go to the bureau, she will lift the box, she will unfold the paper, and to her eyes will be exposed the half-blown bud, and the memories of the past will rush upon and the memories of the pass will rush upon her, and a tear will drop upon the flower; and suddenly it is transfigured, and there is a stir in the dust of the anther, and it rounds out, and it is full of life, and it begins to tremble in the procession up the church aisle, and the dead music of a half continue are comes throbbing through the century ago comes throbbing through the air; and vanished faces reappear, and right hands are jouned, and a manly voice promises: "I will for better or for worse?" and the wedding march thunders a salvo of joy at the departing crowd; but a sigh on anniversary day scatters the scene. Under the deep-fetched breath the altar, the flowers, the congratulating groups are scattered, and there is nothing left but a trembling hand holding a faded rosebud, which is put into the paper, and then into the box, and the box carefully placed in the bureau, and with a sharp, sudden click of the lock the scene is over.

Ah, my friends, let not the prophecies of the flowers on your wedding day be false prophecies. Be blind to each other's faults.

Make the most of each other's excellences.

The earth begins to burn—the bonfire of a great, victory.

All ready now for the prophecies of the flower prophecies are the prophecies. Above all, do not both get mad at once. Remember the vows, the ring on the third finger of the left hand, and the benediction of the calla lilies.

3. If you mist on asking me the question: 3. If you misst on asking me the question:
What are flowers good for? I answer, they are good to honor and comfort the obsequies. The worst gash ever made into the side of our poor earth is the gash of the grave. It is so deep, it is so incurable that it needs something to cover it up. Flowers for the casket, flowers for the hearse, flowers for the casket, flowers for the hearse, flowers for the complete in a grave in a country churchyard, with the fence broken down and the tombstone aslant, and the neighboring cattle browsing amid the mullen stalks, and the Canada thisties, and the Canada thisties, and a June morning in Greenwood the wave of roseate bloom rolling to the top of the mounds and then bleaking into foaming crests of white flowers all around the pillows dust. It is the difference between g under rags and sleeping under pidered blanket. We want Old Mortality other hand.

"Oh," you say, "the dead don't know; it makes no difference to them." I think you are mistaken. There are not so many steamers and rail trains coming to any living ous and constant communication between this world and the better world, do you not suppose your departed friends know what you do with their bodies? Why has God planted "golden rod" and wild flowers in the rest and on the prairie where no human eye er sees them? He planted them there for visible intelligences to look at and adire, and when invisible intelligences come look at the wild flowers of the woods and the table lands, will they not make excursions and see the flowers which you have planted in affectionate rememberance of them?

When I am dead I would like to have a handful of violets—anyone could pluck them out of the grass, or someone could lift from the edge of the pond a water-lily—nothing rarely expensive or insane display as sometimes at funeral rites where the display that the state of the pond from the children's olay takes the bread from the children's anouths, and the clothes from their backs, at something from the great democracy of flowers rather than imperial catafalco of Russian czar, I ask some one whom I may have helped by gospel sermon or Christian ed to bring a sprig of arbutus or a handful

The Bible says, in the midst of the garden there was a sepul cher. I wish that every sepulcher might be

If you insist on asking me the question,
What are flowers good for? I answer, for retigious symbolism. Have you ever studied scriptural flora? The Bible is an arbetum; is a divine conservatory; it is a herbarium exquisite beauty. It you want to illustrate e brevity of the brightest human life you Il quote from Job: "A man cometh forth a flower and is cut down." Or you Il quote from the psalmist: "As the flower will quote from the psalmist: "As the flower of the field so he perisheth; the wind passeth over it and it is gone." Or you will quote from Isaiah: "All fish is grass, and the good-liness thereof is as the flower of the field." Or you will quote from James the apostle: "As the flower of the grass, so he passeth away." What graphic Biole symbolism! All the cut flowers of this Easter day will soon be dead, whatever care you take of them. Though morning and night you baptize them in the name of the shower, the

oh, yes! flowers are almost human. Botantsts tell us that flowers breathe, they take nourishment, they eat, they drink. They are sensitive. They have their likes and dislikes. They sleep, they wake. They live in families. They have their ancestors and their descendants, their high, their hugisl, their descendants, their birth, their burial, their cradle, their grave. Flowers also afford mighty symbolism of Christ, who compared himself to the ancient queen, the filly, and the modern queen, the rose, when He said: "I am the rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley." down from the world's banners eagle and lion, and put on lily and rose, lily and rose. But, my friends, flowers have no grander use than when on Easter moraing we celebrate the reanimation of Christ from the catacombs. All the flowers of to-day spell resurrection. There is not a nook or corner resurrection. There is not a nook or corner in all the building but is touched with the in all the building but is touched with the incense. The women carried spices to the tomb of Christ, and they dropped spices all around about the tomb, and from those spices have grown all the flowers of Easter morn. The two white-pobed angels that urled the stone away from the door of epuicher, and million of the stark and dead hall come forth. However labyrinthian the mausoleum, however anytintan the matssteam, however costly the sarcophagus, however architecturally grand the necropolis, however beautifully parterred the family grounds, we want then all broken up by the lord of the resurrection. The forms that we laid away with our broken bearts must rise again. Father and mother they must come out. Husband and wife—they must come out. Husband and wife—they must come Brothers and sisters—they must come Our darling children—they must come The eyes that with trembling fingers we close must open in the luster of resurrection morn. The arms that we folded in death must join ours in embrace of reunion. The beloved voice that was nushed must be returned. The beloved form must come up without its infirmities, without its fatigues—

Oh, how long it seems for some of you. On, how long it seems for some of you. Watting, waiting for the resurrection. How long! how long! I make for your broken hearts to-day a cool, soft bandage of Easter lilies. Last night we had come in the mails a beautiful Easter card, on the top of it a representation of that exquisite flower called the "trumpet-creeper," and under it the inscription: "The trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised." I comfort ou this day with the thought of resurrec

There were thirty trumpeters stationed at the door of the cathedral, with instruments of music in hand, waiting for the signal, and when the illustrious dead arrived at the gates of St. Paul cathedral, these thirty trumpeters gave one united blast, and then all was silent. Yet the trumpets did not wake the dead.

He slept right on.

But I have to tell you what thirty trumpeers could not do for one man, one trumpeter will do for all nations. The ages have rolled on and the clock of the world's described in the cook of the cook of the world's d

His Sister Alice,

Nobody knew why it was that Dr. with his chisel to go through all the grave-rards of Christendom, and while he carries chisel in one hand we want old Mortality older than he really was; nor why, from being a man full of mirth and loving society, he seemed to shun both. But his sister Alice suspected the cause long, long before Mrs. Merton herself was aroused to the faintest glimmer of the truth, and the truth was sad enough, for Dr. Merton was in debt.

How had such a state of things come about in a thriving household such as was that of Dr. Merton? First of all it had begun on increased expenditure on Mrs. Merton's part; on her insistance on a liberal income to spend; on her utter want of business capacity. Next, the debtor, who was but too good-natured, was imposed upon by the son of an old friend-induced to become his security for £300, which the doctor had to pay after all.

Then, one year he had a number of bad debts, and, as he was generoushearted, he would not curtail his sister's allowance of a hundred a year: for Alice did many things in the household-taught the children, walked out with them, made things for their wear, saved the expense of music lessons for the elder girls, and ther brother argued that if Alice got married and left them they would never get her place supplied by paying any one else a hundred a year, and that such an allowance was her due.

Alice had come to live in her brother's house when she was left homeless by her father's sudden death six years ago. She was now twenty-four; but most people, not aware of the contrary, took her for nineteen or twenty. She was a dozen years younger than the doctor, and a very beautiful young woman, highly intellectual, and fond of literary pursuits.

"Alice, dear," said the doctor one day to his sister, "you look tired-are you working too hard?"

"Not a bit-I like work," said she, cheerily. "What is the use of all this brain work, Alice?" asked the doctor. "Some day you will marry that nice young fellow, Samuel Ormsby, and then you will not need to study.'

Alice flushed up at her brother's re-

"I am very sorry you have taken such an erroneous notion into your head. Edmund." said she. "Let me assure you that Mr. Ormsby and myself are on friendly terms, and nothing more. Nor ever will be," she added mentally, with a sigh that she dared not permit to escape her.

It was a sigh which carried with it a good deal of hidden heart-grief. For in reality Alice Merton loved Samuel Ormsby with deep devotion, but she was inwardly persuaded that he cared nothing whatever for her, and that he would either not marry at all or else choose a wife very brilliant and accomplished.

She had known Mr. Ormsby for two years now. He had bought a very charming property in the neighborhood, and lived about six miles from Dr. Merton's residence, having brought his mother and two sisters to make their home with him

One evening, it chanced that Alice and her brother were alone togethera thing which did not often happenbut to-night Mrs. Merton was spending a few hours at the vicarage, and the children were gone up to bed. Both brother and sister held books in their hands, and appeared to be reading, but in truth, the thoughts of each were busy and sad, taking no heed of the page before them.

All at once, as Alice east a furtive glance at her brother's care-worn face, she met his gaze fixed on her, full of tender anxiety. In an instant she divined that some crisis in his grief had arrived-that he would speak out now and confide to her his secret trouble; and throwing aside her book, she sank on her knees by his side, pressing one of his hands in hers, and repeating:

"Edmund, tell me what it is! There is something which is eating away

"Oh! Alice, we shall have to move into small house, and my wife must teach the girls. How shall I tell her? For we are terribly in debt, and ruin star me in the face. Think what I fee, when I have to say to you, my own sister, that you will have to go out and teach under another roof than mine!" "How much-how much do you owe, Edmund?" she cried, eagerly.

"Seven hundred pounds," said he, with a groan.

"Then you are saved, dearest brother!" eried she, throwing her arms round his neck and k ssing his forehead. "Yes, saved, for I have put by £800, and it is all at your disposalevery penny!"

"You-you, Alice?" murmured the bewildered man, not daring to trust in what he heard.

"Yes, I, Edmund," she answered, clinging to him lovingly. "All the six years I have lived with you, I have put £70 every year into the bank out of the £100 you allowed me. There is more than £400. And the rest I have made by writing articles and stories for different magazines; and once I illustrat- who consumed little other meat than ed a book. And soon all the neighborhood rang fat, here is a note from a customer upwith the news that the beautiful Miss town who wants twenty-five pounds of Merton, the doctor's sister, was going leaf lard in its natural state.

"What!" he replied, "is she really going to teach Lady Whittington's ing, the most lovely girl I ever met! I have not dared to trust myself to see her lately, but now I have hope again." And this is how it was that Samuel Ormsby went wooing the beautiful Alice Merton, and that she consented to become his wife, instead of going to teach Lady Whittington's daughters.

HOW BIG ARE THE WAVES?

Exagerated Notions as to the Turbulency of the Storm-Swept Sea. It is a very common phrase to speak of the waves during a storm as "running mountains high;" but this really means nothing (says The Scotsman). Accurate measurements made by Scoresby proved that, during storms, waves in the Atlantic rarely exceeds 43 feet from hollow to crest, the distance between the crests being 560 feet, and their speed 32½ miles an hour. More recent observations in the Atlantic Magazine. give from 44 to 48 feet as the highest measured waves; but such heights are rarely reached, and, indeed, waves exceeding 30 feet are very seldom encountered. The monsoon waves at of 18 feet, or about 40 feet above mean Bob had a daughter, who did not in-The greatest heights of waves on the British coast were those observed it—being 37½ to 40 feet. Green seas to the depth of 25 feet poured over the parapet of the breakwater at from seven to ten minutes, each wave, it was estimated, being a mass of 40,000 tons of water, and this continuously for three days and nights. The iron pile light-house erected on the Bishop rock was earried away by unbroken seas striking the dwelling, the floor of which was 85 feet above high water. A tower of granite was subsequently erected on the Bishop, and in 1860 the waves carried away the fog bell, weighing three hundred-weight, at an elevation of 100 feet above the sea. In the Shetland islands blocks of stone have been quarried at the height of 70 to 75 feet above the mean sea level.

But these instances of the action of the waves during storms sink into insignificance when it is mentioned that blocks of concrete weighing 1.350 to 2,600 pounds respectively were carried away by the repeated assaults of the wild rolling of Wick bay. The depth to which wave action extends has been differently estimated, but it var es from 70 to 150 feet, as shellfish which are known only to live at these depths are thrown upon the shore during heavy gales, and it has been ascertained that shingle is moved in a depth of fifty feet. For all practical purposes, however, so far as hard works are concerned, it is found that there is little movement of materials under eighteen to twenty feet-below water, the foundations of breakwater hitherto constructed not having been disturbed below these levels.

A Dog-Washing Professor. There are all sorts of ways of earning a living in a big city. One of the most recent that has come to my notice is that of dog washing. There is a Frenchman here who makes a comfortable income by washing dogs. He has a graded scale of prices, and is as busy as can be all day long. For large dogs, St. Bernard, mastiffs and Newfoundlands, he gets $1 for each washing; for setters and collies and dogs of that size, seventy-five cents, and for pug and other toy dogs, fifty sation. Read the bro cents. He has his own towels, combs and brushes, but the owners of the dogs supply the soap. As most dog soaps are expensive, and as it takes nearly a cake to wash a St. Bernard.

this is a wise arrangement. He also makes a specialty of destroying fleas on dogs, but for this he asks a special price. as it is a tedious job, for he catches them flea by flea. and, as every one knows, this is no mean task. A few years ago people not only did not keep dogs to the extent they do now, but they did not take the same care of them, and there were very few who would have spent 50 cents or $1 a week for dog-washing. Now there are any number who are very glad to get it done for the price. In the eyes of a dog-lover there is nothing more melancholy than an uncared-for dog. -New York Letter.

Spokane Falls, W. T., March 31.—There would seem to be no end to the wonderful resources of the United States. Each year we almost wrote each month-witnesses the opening up of new country which sur-passes in natural resources anything hitherto known. This is the story of Minnesota and anown. This is the story of Minnesota and Dakota, marvelous grain producing regions; of Montana with its vast cattle ranges, beautiful fertile valleys and; rich mineral deposits, and now history but repeats itself as the tide of settlement passes the Rockies and enters Washington Territory where the lumber regions of Minnesota, the fertile wheat fields of Dakota, the cattle ranges and mineral resources of Montana seem to have been gathered together with the added blessing of a genial and healthy the added blessing of a genial and healthy climate, for man's profit and pleasure. You only just enter the Territory when you en-counter this wonderful combination of natural advantages. Here in this bustling city of 10,000 population a few miles over the Idaho line, you have a commercial and industrial lo,000 population a lew miles over the Idaho line, you have a commercial and industrial centre possessing the finest water power in the country and drawing at once on the mountains to the east and north for their lumber and mineral wealth, and on the plains and varleys to the west and south for their agricultural and stock-raising resources all of which it makes tributary to its own growth and progress. The Spokane River is the outlet of Cœur d' Alene Lake, and a branch of the Columbia. It flows through the centre of this city, dividing itself near the eastern limits into two and then three distinct streams which plunge down a decent 156 feet in the course of its passage through the city the river reuniting before the final fall of sixty feet is reached. The channels are cut as by the hand of man through solid masses of basaltic rock that form indestructible race-ways. The force of the river at this restricts here was reached. masses of basaltic rock that form intestrectible race-ways. The force of the river at this point; has been carefully measured at 125,000 horse power, more by far than the power furnished by St."Anthony's falls at Minneapolis, and sufficient to run the entire manufactures of New England with a good deal to spare. The division of the river into several channels adds to its availability for manufacturing purposes, while the fact that it never either freezes over or overflows its it never either freezes over or overflows its bank are additional advantages which its Minnesota rival (Falls of St. Anthony) does not possess. Already, although the city is not yet a decade old, flour and saw-mills, sash and door factories and other enterprises have been erected on its banks. But important as manufactures are they alone will not build up a great city; it must have other resources to depend upon, our chief of these is ever a rich agricultural country to draw from. Here again Spokane Falls is fortunate. South and west is a rich agricultural region, abounding in a soil which for fertility surpasses even that of Dakota or Minnesota. Wheat crops reaching sometimes as high as 75 bushels per acre, while from 25 to 40 bushels is a fair average; oats yielding as much as a 100 bushels and potatoes and other root crops doing proportionately as well, tell tube of the chemical ingredients of the soil the tale more eloquently than any analytical tube of the chemical ingredients of the soil could do. Fruits of the temperate zone, apples, pears, plums, etc., grow in abundance; hay and nutritious grasses have yielded as high as five tons per acre, while land which is too broken for agricultural purposes affords unlimited cattle, sheep and horse ranges, for horse raising is a regular and very lucrative business in this Country. These agricultural lands can be bought at from $3 to $10 per acre of the railroad company or private individuals, while of course there are yet thousands of acres of government land in the territory, although that nearest town and railroad communication is all taken up. Supplementing this agricultural territory tributary to Spokane Falls, this city has as another source of wealth, the fact that it is the distributing point for the vast mining tegion to the North, East and South-east, a country replete with mineral deposits that have only just begun to be opened up. There are at least seven distinct mining districts within convenient distance of this town, which is made the headquarters and business centre for the miners and mine-owners, and centre for the miners and mine-owners, and the source from which they draw the major part of their supplies. The Cœur d'Alene district almost directly east of the Falls has already become 1 amous, where mine which have been sold for $1,500,000 have which have been sold for $1,500,000 have been discovered, and new ones are being opened up daily. North of the Cœur d'Alene is the Pend d'Oreille district lying around the shores of Lake Pend d'Oreille. The Salmon river country, the Colville district, the Kootenay, the Metaline, etc. Not only is this city the natural trade centre for all this great mining region, but active steps are being taken to erect here smelting and concentrating works. Besides the main line of the Northern Pacific Railroad which passes through Spokane Falls, a number of branch traing works. Besides the main line of the Northern Pacific Railroad which passes through Spokane Falls, a number of branch lines connect it with the surrounding agricultural and mining regions, and the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern, a Pacific coast line, is building rapidly towards this city, where it is expected that it will meet the St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba line from the east, thus forming a new transcontinental line and making Spokane Falls an important railroad centre. There is only one other natural advantage that even an all hountiful providence could give to complete the material advantages of this section of country, and that a genial and healthy climate—has not been dented. The winters are short—about 4 weeks—and not seven months, summers long, with cool, pleasant mights and balmy days. There were only three thunder storms recorded in two years here, and even this winter of extraordinary severity all over the world did not prevent the wild flo wers from blooming on the Spokane praises in Lennary. The town itself occunies flowers from blooming on the Spokane prairies in January. The town itself occupies the valley of the Spokane river on either side of the falls, although some of the finest residences occupy commanding locations on the neighboring nells and bluffs. The streets are wide, and lighted by electricity, with fine brick blocks on either side of them. Abund-ant water is furnished by the Holly system. The residents enjoy the further conveniences of daily papers, gas, telephones, and street cars, while a moter line is to be built to suburban districts. Churches representing suburban districts. Churches representing the leading denominations, private, public and parochial schools, three colleges, one controlled by the Methodists, and another by the Catholies, an academy for young ladies, which will be ready to receive pupils the coming school year, are Spokane's educational advantages, which exceed any point on the North Pacific railroad between the Twin Cities and the coast. A Costly Railroad Pass.

"I thought it was economy," said a man very mournfully the other day, What is it That is Killing so Many "for she was bent on seeing the state. and I thought it would save railroad fares, but she is simply ruining me since she got a free pass all over the place. You see, I did some little service to the railroad people, and I happened to mention that my wife was going down South.

'No,' said she; 'isn't it lovely not to have to pay any fare?' 'Beautiful,' said I. 'Now, dear, I want you to give me $25. I really must buy some clothes to go to San Jose in.'
'Twenty-five dollars?' 'Yes. You wouldn't like to have your wife traveling without any style would you?' Well,' I said, 'is it quite necessary for you to go to San Jose?' 'No; but I might as well. I don't need to pay anything on the train.' And at the first break that free pass cost me $25. Well, she started off to San Jose, and she concluded she would go on the broad guage road. When the conductor came along she pulled out her pass. It was the narrow guage road pass. She had to pay her fare. When she started to come back she concluded she'd take the narrow gauge to San Francisco, and she forgot she had a narrow gauge pass and bought her tickets. Yes, the free pass is a very marked: "Now, gentlemen, let me economical thing for a woman."

A Bat's Liver for Luck.

Of all the queer superstitions of which I ever heard, there is one in possession of a man on 'change that caps the superstitious climax. I won't tell you his name, but he is one of the most prominent grain and pork dealers in the city. One night last summer he was a visitor at the 5th district police station. We were bothered a good deal by bats that kept flying up and down through the stable attached to

Our visitor and the stable boys killed several bats, and the liver was taken from each of them and carried away in the merchant's pocket. He wanted them, he said, to give him luck in his business transactions, for he declared there was more good luck in one bat's liver than there was in half a hundred rabbit's feet, which were well known to possess luck of no mean proportions. He told us where he had discovered the bat's liver charm.

It was on a lower Mississippi steamboat, about a year ago. A party of colored deck hands were playing craps. One of the party had a bat's liver and he laid it on the deck every time he picked up the ivories to throw. As a result he won all the money his companions had. After doing this four or five times on the trip up from New Orleans to Memphis, the bat's-liver holder was barred from the game. He couldn't lose .- St. Louis Globe Demo-

Observant Barbers. The loquacious barber now and then have intervels when they remark incidents that escape the attention of many in the tear and rush of life. "You sleep on the right side of your body," one of them said yesterday, as he clipped the semi-blonde hair of a customer. "Why?" Because, don't you see, that your hair is thicker on the right than on the left side? We can readily tell on what side a customer sleeps. The heat is confined to the ease. side of the head resting on the pillow, and that heat makes the hair grow thicker about the temple." The barber didn't explain the accepted statement that the constant wearing of the hat produces so much heat that men addicted to the practice are held.

He Discovered a Mistake. Joseph Haydn, the compiler of the "Dictionary of Dates," went one day to Sir Joshua Reynolds's studio. The artist had just fininised the portrait of Mrs. Bellington in the character of St. Cecilia listening to the celestial music. "It is like her," said Haydn, "but there is strange mistake." "What is that?" asked Reynolds, in much perturbation. "You have painted her listening to the angels; you ought to Buffalo Express: It is not unlikely that Sam Jones made this reflection upon reporters, which is credited to him: "I will be in heaven when these stinking, miserable little reporters who malign me are sitting on one ear in hell, trying to keep cool by fanning themselves with the other." But if he said this he has done more damage to the cause of righteousness and decency than a lifetime of goodish talk could repair. "Just Hear that Child Scream!" said Mrs. Smith to heresister, Mrs. Davis, as the sound of a child's shrucks came across the garden from a neighbor's house. "What kind of a woman have you for a neighbor? Does she abuse her children?" "No, indeed," replied Mrs. Davis, "She is one of the most tender mothers in existence. But you see, the believes in the old-fushioned styles of doctoring. When a child needs physic, she doctoring. When a child needs physic, she lills a spoon with some nauseous dose, lays the little victim flat on her lap, holds his nose till he is forced to open his mouth for breath, when down goes the dreadful mess. Then come the yells." "No wonder," said Mrs. Smith, "Why doesn't she use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? They are effective without being harsh, and are as easy to take as sugar plums. I always give them to my children." "And so do I," said Mrs. Davis.

on the North Pacific railroad between the Twin Cities and the coast. Socially Spokane Falls is a charming place of residence, there being a large circle of educated and cultured people, who take pleasure in musical and literary pursuits, while the several churches have social and benevolent organizations connected with them. MYSTERIOUS FATALITIES.

Prominent Men? The death of Kaiser Wilhelm, ex-Gov. Hoffman, Banker J. W. Drexel, Lieut-Gov. Dorsheimer, Dr. Carpenter, Chief-Justice Waite, and Genl. B. H. Brewster, in quick succession, and all from the same cause, although having different names, is startling.

March and April are fatal months, not only for consumptives but also for many diseases more disguised but none the less fatal. "I took the blamed things home and

Gov. Hoffman had heart disease. gave them to her. They began to Gov. Dorsheimer, apparently a strong, well, robust man, over six feet high, sickens and dies in four days, of pneumonia.

Chief-Justice Waite meets the same fate and he was apparently the personification of vigor.

Drexel, the Philadelphia banker, and Brewster, Ex-Atty. Gen'l, were suddenly cut off in the midst of great usefulness, by Bright's disease, and Dr. Carpenter, the well-known New York physician, suddenly died of Kidney disease, never haviny suspected that he was at all troubled therewith!

This reminds us of the case of Dr. Frank Hawthorn, of New Orleans. He was lecturing before the Louisiana University on the peculiarly deceptive character of Kidney disease and the methods of microscopical and chemical tests.

After having shown specimen after specimen of diseased fluids, and made very clear the point that kidney disease may exist without the knowledge or show you the healthy water of a strong, well man."

He applies the test! He staggers!

"Gentlemen, I have made a terrible discovery! "he gasps," I myself have the fatal Bright's disease!"

In less than a year this specialist of the commonest and most fatal of diseases was dead. He was a victim of advanced Kidney disease the presence of which in himself he had never sus-

L. B. PRICE, M. D., a gentleman and physician of the highest standing of Han-over C. H., Va., four years ago, after trying every other remedy for Bright's diease, including famous mineral waters, cured himself by Warner's Safe Cure, and March 24, 1888, wrote: "I have never had the slightest symptoms of my old and fearful trouble."

MR. JOHN DOHERTY, of Concord, N.
H., was given up with Bright's disease by the best physicians in 1879. He was in a dreadful state. After using and being cured in 1881 by Warner's Safe Cure, in 1887, he wrote; "I am better than ever.'

JOHN COLEMAN, Esq., 100 Gregory St., New Haven, Conn., was first taken sick in 1873, gradually ran down until he had pronounced Bright's disease, rheu-matism and all the other deceptive signs of kidney disease. The best physicians in New Haven could do nothing for him. He then began using Warner's Safe Cure, 200 bottles of which he and his family have used and he is cured. W. T. CRAWFORD, proprietor St. Charles Hotel, Richmond Va., and well known all through the South, several years ago was in death-agony from kidney disease, convulsions and bright's disease. The best Philadelphia specialist in such diseases pronounced him practically dead and incurable. Everything else failing, he took Warner's Safe Cure abundantly and regularly, until fully restored to health, and now he says, "After a lapse of many years I am as sound as a dollar, with no symptoms of my old trouble. I owe my life to Warner's Safe Cure."

Kidney disease is the most deceptive, the most universal, the most fatal dis-

If the most learned men cannot know without the use of microscopical and chemical tests that they have kidney disease, how much more liable is thelayman to be, unknown to himself, in the very jaws of death, who does not feel as well as formerly, but who does not think anything specially ails him, and whose physician may assure him that he will soon be "all right."

In these days, people recognize that it is wiser to prevent disease than to await its arrival to cure it. When you know that you may be in the greatest peril and not have any idea of the fact from any defined set of ill-feelings, the wisest course to pursue is to follow the counsel and experience above outlined, and thoroughly renovate the system, cleanse the blood, tone the nerves and insure your own life against these common, mysterious fatalities.

WHAT a spectacle we have at the national capital—the majority party in Congress fillibustering against the consideration of first. a bill! That is something new in the unable by their votes to prevent its passcourse proclaims their incapacity and their hopeless demoralization.

THE wise men who are correcting the mistakes of Nature by sawing off the horns of cattle, are beginning to find that they, with all their wisdom, can commit mistakes almost as great as Nature makes. In England and Ireland, where the practice has long been followed, the cattle so treated for a few generations have degenerated; and now a dispatch from Bloomington, Ill., reports large herds suffering from decay of the parts, and lapsing into a very pitiable condition. The craze has had a great growth in that state, and we have recently been pained to notice that some valued friends have fallen victims to a delusion which first appeared there as the ravings of a troublesome crank.

RHODE ISLAND has had a change in her governmental affairs the past year, and is satisfied. The late election shows that her fortunes are, in the future, to be cast in with the republicans. It is generally a good thing, when a boy becomes dissatisfied with home, to let him try his fortunes away from the paternal roof; and the same applies to the people at large. Not satisfied with republican rule, Rhode Island was led to try democracy, but a year was sufficient to convince her of the desirableness of a speedy return to former ways of life, and she, no doubt, comes back much wiser and perfectly happy to the old camp. Does any one mistrust that this foreshadautumn?

This age is noted for its contempt of what was in other ages regarded as insurmountable obstacles. If a thing needs to be done, no matter what it is, or how difficult, a way is found to do it. The latest instance of great engineering skill is the removal of Brighton Beach Hotel, an immense structure, weighing 5,000 tons and covering nearly two acres of ground. It seems this hotel was built so near the water line that the inroads made by the waves were liable to tumble it into the sea; so it was decided to move it inland. It was, therefore, the other day mounted on 120 flat cars on 24 tracks, and the first day was drawn by heavy locomotives 120 feet. The immense building moved without a crack and will soon be placed where old Neptune can not get access to it.

COL. ELLIOTT F. SHEPARD, son-in-law of the late Wm. H. Vanderbilt, and a well known philanthropist and Christian worker, has recently purchased "The daily papers in New York City. The change of ownership makes a new departure in journalism as indicated by his placing in each issue some scripture text at the head of the column of editorial comments. Mr. Shepard assigns the following reason, given to a reporter for the Tribune: "I print the texts," he says, who are necessarily much absorbed in business should be reminded of the words of their Heavenly Father." A very good move, this, and a very good reason as well, and no place needs some-

PROHIBITIONISTS AND ABOLITION-The address of Rev. Mr. Mead, referred to elsewhere in this issue, contained much that we can approve. His words touching the evils of the drink habit were eloquent and true. They ought to ring in the ears of this community, till these nurseries of crime, the saloons, are driven from our midst. Such words cannot be repeated too often, nor dwelt upon too earnestly. It seems strange, however, that men who have so clear a perception of the real needs of our social life, can be so short sighted in their conception of the methods by which those needs are to be met. They are accurate in diagnosing the disease, but fail disastrously when they attempt to prescribe a remedy. There must be a lurking consciousness in the minds of these men that their position is untenable, for on no other grounds can we explain their unfair and untrue statements relative to the attitude of the republican party on the question of temperance. While it is not claimed that that party is as pronounced as it might be, nevertheless these gentlemen know that the party does pronounce emphatically against the saloon, and is willing to go in the direction of its extermination as far as there is a promise of any practical results. To go farther than this is folly and not wisdom. Republicans do not propose to surrender the enormous influence of a great organization, and take to guerilla warfare which can result only in inflicting injury upon friend and foe alike, or upon friend more than upon the common enemy. The temperance men of the party propose to fight the evil through the organization and not expend their energy in destroying the organization. To antagonize the best element in this great moral conflict, is to entrench more firmly the evil which it is

Rev. Mr. Mead may satisfy his conrepublican party maintains an equivocal position on this question, but he knows, or ought to know, that his attempts betray his want of candor and sense of justice. It is exceedingly amusing to those who democratic party. The minority party tween the conflict with slavery and with sometimes feel justified in fillibustering rum. One might suppose they would to prevent the consideration of a bill which finally come to see that the logic of the they deem iniquitous, when they would be case removes the ground from under their their feet, and leaves them nowhere. If age; but for the party having a large their efforts were confined to the work of adopted prohibition in the last eight majority in Congress to adopt such a rousing the people to a just sense of existing evils, and of educating the public conscience, they could use the illustration of slavery; but when they attempt to draw inspiration for separate political action from this source, they make themselves little less than ridiculous. The only political result which the abolition party ever accomplished, was to defeat Mr. Clay and elect Mr. Polk; and every tyro in history knows that the election of Mr. Polk umph of slavery. By his election the institution was extended and the slave power increased in the country, by just so much influence as that vast state brought to its aid, in the councils of the nation. This was just the opposite of what the abolitionists were working for, and it is strange that the prohibitionists connot see themselves in this mirror. Over and over again, their separate action at the polls has given whisky and the whisky power a new lease of life. There is scarcely a municipality in this state which does not furnish proof of this fact, and yet they persist in their irrational course. They strike ten blows for rum where they strike one against it. The abolition party, as a moral force, did good work; but when, in opposition to the advice of their wisest leader, Garrison, it entered into partisan politics, it died amid the shouts of the triumphant slave oligarchy over the aquisition of Texas and an increase of political power. The great battle of slavery was fought by stalwart abolitionists withows a return of greater moment in the in a political organization whose fundamental tenet on the slavery question was, "We can do indirectly what cannot be done directly." It was a party pledged to the principle of restraint, not abolition. Its members proposed to restrict where they could not abolish, and they saw and realized the immense advantage which a great organization would give them. Sumner and Seward and Hale, and others, had the courage and wisdom to stay in that organization though it fell far short of what they desired. Gerrit Smith and other extremists were too good for such fellowship, and, like guerillas among the mountains, they concocted the John Brown bringing to pass. The Rev. Mr. Mead, we are told, is a Methodist and, therefore, he and the writer have a common interest. We honor and love that great organization Christian influence; but is there nothing that organization he would have different? For years it held in its fellowship the slave and the slave-holder alike. The crime of slavery was condoned by that church, and many were led to separate from her communion on that account. The Wesleyan church was started because "because I think it desirable that men of the great moral wrong within the mother church. These Wesleyans had better reasons for leaving the church than prohibitionists can assign for their own action, for the former were crushed by the official power of the church; their thing of that sort more than New York | mouths were closed; and, strong and elocity, and no place, we fear, will appreciate | quent men as many of them were, they were nevertheless posted into obscure hamlets and put to diverse discomforts be cause they were abolitionists; but can prohibitionists charge such sins to the organization which they have left? There were other men, however, of more courage and greater patience and wisdom, who did not leave that church. They fought the evil within its own communion and suffered for the time, what the dominant sentiment chose to inflict. There was too much of good in the organization to surrender it to the slave power, and so they stayed and struck stalwart blows where they would correct the evil but not destroy the good. Would Mr. Mead, had he lived in those times, have had the courage to stay and wage the battle of right within the church, or would he have withdrawn and turned his batteries and his hate on that great monument of Wesley's designing? Who did the most to purify the church in general, and exalt her in the minds of men? Was it the little faction which withdrew, or the stalwart heroes like Wm. H. Hosmer, who endured there bukes of the church and the disgrace which it attempted to heap upon him? He and men

Sea are glad of her. In the same line should the factionists of to-day proceed if they have at heart the cause they profess. Within the republican party, you, Mr. Mead, can do the most effcient work. The trend of its movement is right. Its organization brings to the CASH CAPITAL OF $50,000 contest the grandest possibilities; and sought to crush: and this is little less than as you to-day rejoice that the factionists did not destroy the church of your choice science, in attempting to show that the and of your love, in the evil days of the past, so, in this day of conflict, it is the part of wisdom to use your heaven-born gifts to insure what is best in the political field and use it to promote the ends for which you labor and for which you

Progress in other states is not less marked. In Missouri, as late dispatche tell us, 33 counties and many towns have months, under a law that combines what was advocated in this paper over a year ago, and to which we were unable to attract the notice of the Detroit Tribunecounty, town, and municipal option. The Missouri law went into effect last June. In addition to a state license ranging from $25 to $200 semi-annually, the county imposes a license of $250 to $400 for six months, where prohibition does not pre vail. The Secretary of State writes us in was the annexation of Texas and the tri- reply to inquiries that the law is well observed and the business greatly restricted

> We do not hear much about Arkansas, but that state has made great progress There is local option by counties, towns cities, wards, and within a three-mile limit of any church or school of any grade, and the County Judge may in his discretion refuse all license in his county without a popular vote, under a law that has been sustained by the Supreme Court A year ago, prohibition was in actual force under these laws in 48 entire counties out of 75, and in three fourths of the area of the state; and where license prevails the state and county tax is $600, and the muni cipal tax $300 to $1500. The option in counties is submitted to vote; but in towns, cities and three-mile districts it is deter mined by majority petition of adult citi zens including women.

In Georgia, prohibition under county option prevails over more than three fourths of the state; and, to a considerable extent, in Alabama and Mississippi.

In Florida, 300 voters must approve an application for license by their signatures, and the saloon must pay $150 tax each to the state, the county, and the town.

In South Carolina, liquor can only be sold by consent of municipal authorities. who assess license in their discretion, rang ing from $200 to $1000.

North Carolina and Virginia have town option, not very effective.

Tennessee and Texas voted last year upon constitutional prohibition, and lost it by narrow majorities in both states. So did Oregon and Michigan. Tennessee has a four-mile limit law.

Nevada passed an anti-treating law in 1885, which proved a dead letter and was repealed last year. The Secretary of raid, and were shorn of all influence for State writes that it seems to be the general opinion that "every one must be the The republican party moved forward slowly, conservatively, but to a final result, | judge of what is best for himself."

Wyoming, where women vote and hold office, licenses saloons at $100 to $300; and but could claim no political influence in reports comparatively little drinking. The Cherokee Nation has had statutory prohibition since 1840, and Mr. Boudinot writes. "The material, social and moral Mail and Express," one of the brightest which early threw over us its benign and condition of the people is much improved in proportion as the prohibition law is executed faithfully.'

Nebraska and Illinois have high license laws, with minimum of $500 and no maximum limit; and in the latter state municipal and county prohibition are in force in many places through the discretionary power of local authorities in the issue of license, practical local option being secured in the election of license and antilicense boards.

Indiana assesses a state license of $100. and a local license not over $100. The Secretary of State says the degree of observance of existing law is "poor."

Ohio has municipal option and state tax of $100 to $200, and four years ago cast over 300,000 votes for a prohibition amendment.

Minnesota has prohibition in a large proportion of the rural towns under town option, and a minimum linse of $1000 in cities of 10,000, and $500 elsewhere. The "Dead Line Law" excludes saloons from the residence portion of Minneapo-

LESSON III, SECOND QUARTER, IN-TERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 15.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxiv, 42-51. Golden Text, Mark xiii, 37-Memorize Verses 42, 43, 44-Comment by Rev. H.

[From Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, publisher.] Notes.-V. 42. Watch, because of the unexpectedness and suddenness of His coming. . 43. House broken, dug through, for houses in the east were built of sunburned clay, which was often dug through. V. 44. Ready, not only watchfulness, but prepared for His com-V. 45. Faithful and wise, watching and ready. V. 46. Blessed, used by Christ, always denotes something exceptional and rare. V. 47. A great reward for a rare man. V. 48. Evil, because unfaithful—unfaithfulness springs from unbelief. V. 49. Unbelief leads to cruelty, rioting and wickedness. V. 51. Asunder, cut off from God's people and God's presence. Weeping and gnashing of teeth, excluded forever from hope, "weeping" because of the opportunities lost eternally, "gnashing his teeth" as he remembers the folly of his course; his eternity s made up of regrets and self censure. This he fire that is never quenched.

Jesus had left the temple never to return to it again. He had predicted its destruc-tion. In company with his disciples, he journeys toward Bethany. On the way over the hill he tells them many things about the destruction of Jerusalem, the end of the age and of his coming again. The Greek word for watch is closely allied with the word wake. The master enjoins not a curious looking for his coming, but a vigilance and diligence that overlooks no duty and indulges

We too must watch against temptations. evil influences, unfaithfulness and all the wiles of the devil.

We must watch for his coming with hope and joy. And hasten it by watching for the signs of his spiritual presence, and for openings and opportunities to serve him. The obscurity and uncertainty as to the time of his coming is the reason why we should watch. The event itself is as certain as death, but the time of the event is most un-certain. The destruction of Jerusalem was a type of Christ's second coming, which will take place in due time.

V. 43. The duty of watchfulness is illustrated by one watching against robbers. Not knowing when they may come, the prudent householder must keep a constant watch. Otherwise there is no safety. If he knew the day and hour when the burglar would come,

V. 44. Included in this state of watchfulness is the idea of preparation. Only those not ready find his coming uncomfortable. Not only must we profess but our lives must be in accordance with our profession. Readiness to meet Christ, at a moment's warning or without any warning at all, is the duty of every Christian. V. 45-47. Here the duty of watchfulness is illustrated by a faithful servant or steward. Faithfulness and ability made this servant a ruler over others, a position he did not abuse, for he wisely dispensed food to those under him. The ministers of Christ owe their office purely to the fact that they give the bread of life to souls, and they are honored for the work's sake.

Note the reward which Christ gives. It is both outward and inward. Larger rulership, wider spheres, greater opportunities are given, together with greater capacity and richer experience.

V. 48. As true watching is connected with faith, so not watching is connected with un-belief. The wicked servant says or thinks 'in his heart" what he is afraid or ashamed to speak openly. The worst skepticism is that which lurks in the heart. Unbelief is the primal cause of all evil thinking and acting. V. 49. Unbelief leads the evil servant not only to neglect the household in not giving nourishment to its inmates, but to maltreat ing his fellow servants who were faithful to their absent Lord. They were abused because they were faithful. One sin leads to another, and the lesser to the greater. Next he resorts to worldliness and immorality. Tyranny over others usually goes hand in hand with laxity toward ourselves and ends in self indulgence.

V. 50. Christ still "lord" of the sinful servant at last comes. Thoughts that he would not come, did not avail to hinder his coming. The unexpectedness of his coming is again made prominent.

V. 51. The loving and tender Saviour here uses words suggestive of the most terrible punishment of the wicked. "Shall be cut sunder," means that the body shall be cut into two parts as by a saw or orther instru-ment of torture. Christ used the strongest words in vogue when speaking of the punish ment of the wicked. He drew his metaphors from the most terrible modes of punishment The wicked servant is a "hypocrite" because he under the guise of fidelity expected at last to present himself to his lord, and because under the semblance of official zeal he tor-The Upsilantian. under the semblance of official zeal he tormented his fellow servants. His place was appointed with "hypocrites," Luke has it "with unbelievers," for unbelief is at the bottom of all hypocrisy. He must go with hypocrites because he is one. Each person at last must go to his own place of rewards and to his own company.

The last clause of the verse denotes the bitterest agony of the mind and soul. "Weeping," because of opportunities forever lost; "gnashing of teeth," because he remembers the folly of his course. Eternity is spent in unavailing regrets and in the sullen rage of self-condemnation.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., March 12, 1888. Last week brought a rather heavy rainall for this section, about one and three fourths inches in a couple of days,—an old fashioned, eastern rain, but the sun has a faculty of drying up the mud pretty fast, which is a great comfort in a region where sidewalks are expensive and consequently somewhat limited. But rain if ever hard, the streets here can not compete for mud with Los Angeles, a place which, firmly believe, is the champion mud hole in wet weather in the country. In other respects it may have all the advantages in the world, as far as I know.

The rain has hindered the orange gathering somewhat, but has caused the grass ering somewhat, but has caused the grass and barley to come rapidly forward, and many pieces of this grain show a fine growth and deep green color, some of the barley standing six or seven inches high. This is mostly grown for hay, here, as the demand has lately been good and prices well up both for the barley and alfalfa hay. The latter is grown by irrigation, as with it half a dozen crops can be cut in a with it half a dozen crops can be cut in a season; but the barley has to trust to the water that falls "on the just and unjust," It is getting plenty of it this winter, too, as the rainfall here to date is much greater than last season, or in fact than usually

Will No Longer Refuse to Touch "Q" Cars.

Wise Counsels Prevail on Both Sides and the Roads Resume Business.

The boycott on Burlington freight came to an end for the second time Tuesday night. The strikes on the St. Paul, Ft. Wayne, and Michigan Central railroads are ended and there will be no further spread of the troubles which have threatened for several days to demoralize the entire commercial interests of Chicago.

The switch engines steamed up as usua in the various yards Wednesday morning and proceeded to handle all the cars offered without discrimination against the Burlington road. This result was brought about through the mediation of Chief Sargent of the Firemen's Brotherhood. The switchmen realized that the back bone of their strike was broken when the Michigan Central men returned work Tuesday. Another reason why they gave up the fight was the successful transfer f trains made by the St. Paul road. The train which the St. Paul company sent to the stock yards in the morning was alive with the special policemen of the company. They to the jail. guarded it at every point and the strikers saw that the company was in earnest. The gage of battle was withdrawn and the strikers sued for peace.

Shortly after the close of the Michigan crowded meeting that the employes of each road should use their own judgment about Crea's reply was that they would all be taken back if they agreed to handle freight without discrimination. This was agreed to, and the men began work Wednesday morning, despite the fact that they were discharged and paid of Tuesday. Pennsylvania thus breaks its record of not taking back discharged strikers.

Early in the evening the same request to be reinstated in their places was made by the St. Paul men to Superintendent Clarke. The request was granted on the same conditions. Superintendent Clarke, Assistant Superintedent Earling, and other officials of the St. Paul road held a conference here Tuesday afternoon and were apprised by Chief Sargent, who spoke both for the switchmen and brootherhood men, that the strikers were willing to return to work in themorning without conditions. The officials agreed about 7 o'clock to take all the men back, and the latter were so notified by Chief Sargent.

PLUNGED INTO THE RIVER.

A Train on the St. Paul Road Dashes of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Road occurred Thursday morning about three miles west of New Hampton, Iowa. The west-bound passenger train plunged over;a bridge into the Wapsie River, swollen to a fearful torrent. The engine, baggage car, and smoker were piled together in the river where the water was ten feet deep, the two passenger cars following. Five dead bodies have been taken from the wreck and it is thought others have been lost. Over twenty were injured, many of them severely.

The train was composed of a baggage and express car, two passengers, one smoker, and a sleeper. The passenger coaches were but fairly filled, but the smoker contained about forty men, women, and children, most of whom were foreigners.

The train had pulled over the first bridge and was a short distance from the main of ice that had floated down the stream and had lodged directly across the track. The engine left the rails and plunged down an embankment of about six feet into the river.

The tender tore loose and plunged ahead of the Authorities at Different. the engine into the river. The smoker kep the track until it was thrown over on the tender, and rolling down the embankment was soon submerged in water. The two passenger cars left the track, but were not badly wrecked and none of the passenger seriously injured. The sleeper was the only minutes not a person remained in either of these coaches and, strange to say, none was seriously injured. Meanwhile men from New Hampton arrived on the scene and their attention was attracted to the smoking At they approached it the scene presented was awful. The car was almost entirely submerged in water, the side being upward. Men were soon on top, and the injured, dead, excitement. and dying were taken out. JACOB SHARP IS DEAD.

The Chief Defendant in the New York "Boodle' Prosecution Passes Away.

Jacob Sharp died in New York a few minutes after 9 Thursday evening. He had been sinking since Monday but hope for his recovery was not abandoned until Thursday Jacob Sharp came into national prominence on account of the heavy bribes, amounting to more than $200,000, which he paid to the board of aldermen in New York in 1884 for inte. He re-called many precedents for the decision, and especially the precedent pre-lented in the case of the Electoral Com-mission bill, when the legislative day ex-tended over thirty calendar days. He overbought, however, and the bill was rushed through. It was vetoed by the mayor, but immediately passed again over the veto.

The different steps taken in the prosecu-Engineers, Switchmen, and Firemen tion of the "boodlers" and bribe-givers are matters of national notoriety. Very recently it was announced that District Attorney Fellows was prepared to guarantee Sharp's conviction. It was said that arrangements had been made with some of the "boodle" aldermen, now fugitives in Canada, whereby they would be given immunity from punishment for turning State's evidence.

In 1883 the First National Bank was established at Stevens Point and A. E. Morse came there from Mauston to accept the position of cashier. He was a young married man, handsome and clever, and as he went much into society he at once became acquainted with Mrs. Haseltine, a leader of fashion and the queen of society circles. Mr. Haseltine had no intimation of the state of affairs until the next summer, when the truth accidentally became known to him. He investigated the stories, satisfied beyond the shadow of a doubt that his wife had been too intimate with Morse, if not with Curran, secured a revolver and shot Morse dead on sight. In the trial that followed Haseltine was cleared upon the grounds of emotional insanity, one of his ounsel being Daniel Vorhees, of Indiana. The evidence introduced was convincing that the four were guilty of the offense charged, and it was shown that they had indulged in acts of depravity too disgusting for ublication. After Hazeltine's acquittal he reported to have said: "John Curran and I can not live in the same city; he must leave the place; if we ever meet, one of us will surely die." In addition to the regular yearly budget for the army and navy, the German Government was granted an amount of money raised in form of a loan, every year from 1875 till now. The amount total of loans thus raised for extraordinary yearly expenses, including the loan granted a few weeks ago for the re-establishment of the militia (Landwehr) of the second call, is approximately $224,000,000-that is $16,000,000 a year. "CONSECRATED TO AN IDEA."

Why the Most Fertile Land in America is Wasted.

A Mistaken Spirit of Kindness Which Is a Hinderance to the Indians and an Outrage to White Men-Dr. Cutler, Who Was a Government Official in the Territory for Many Years, Gives the Sentimentalists Some Plain Talk-Some Ancient and Modern History and Some Plain, Common-Sense Talk. The following letter addressed to the editor of The Chicago Inter Ocean appeared in that paper of a recent date: Some days ago a correspondent of the Inter Ocean entered a protest against the opening up to settlement the Indian country south of Kansas and gave some reasons thereof which I will endeavor to answer. "It is, or ought to be, known to the people of this country," says the correspondent, "that any such movement would be impossible without violating the most binding and sacred pledges that any government could make with its people. It has no doubt so often been done in cases of treaties and pledges made to the original possessors of this continent that the public conscience has been blunted, and it is hardly considered a sin or disgrace for a great nation to lie and steal. A convention of border ruffians," continues this writer, "held a week or two ago resolved that it was high time that this territory (Oklahoma) was opened for improvement." Now let us inquire into the true status of the territory that it is contemplated in the Springer bill to open up to settlement and see if our people really are thieves, and the large and enthusiastic body of representative men who met in convention at Kansas City some weeks ago were in in fact but "border ruffians," as thus represented. In the first place, the land that it is proposed to throw open to settlement was sold by the terms of the treaty of 1866 to the United States by the Indians on terms and at a price fixed by the Indians themselves.

It is true that the government names which the lands are to be used (the settlement upon them of freedmen and other tribes of Indians), and proceeded in good faith to locate Kansas and western tribes upon the land after. A number of the small tribes had been thus located; the Indians from whom the lands had been purchased mill, five miles from Jeffersonville, was raised such a howl of indignation and the white settlers on the borders of Kansas and Texas also protested so strongly that the government was compelled to desist, and congress soon after passed a bill forbidding further location of wild tribes upon the lands. Over 13,000,000 acres, including the lands in the Cherokee strip, which were sold in a previous treaty, and that disposed of by the treaty of 1866 were thus sold to the United States, Of the lands purchased of the Cherokees some 2,000,000 acres have been disposed of in the settlement of other tribes, for -The agent of the Indiana, Illinois & Iowa | which the Cherokees have received over Railroad at Shelby, a short distance east of a half million of dollars. By the treaty of 1866 the Creeks ceded to the United States 3,250,560 acres, the west half of their domain, for which they received $975, 168, and the Seminoles ceded 2,169,080. The Seminoles received in part pay, 200,000 acres of the land acquired from the Creeks in the treaty of the same year. The land thus acquired in the treaty of 1866 goes to make up the territory of Oklahoma proper. The five civilized tribes have left, as a perpetual domain, vails in the vicinity, as the disease is known a rich and fertile country, nearly 200 miles square, and containing within a -Ira Decker, a pupil in the city school of fraction of 20,000,000 acres of as good land as there is on the continent. Divided among 60,000 people the the individual. Now if we estimate five to the family, which is a small estimate for these people, we have 1,650 acres to the family. Where there is one Indian that cultivates fifty acres there are 100 that are content with ten or less. Where, on earth, can you point to a people better provided for? Every parent, of course, realizes the necessity of so training the child as to properly fit it for the great battle of life, yet how often do we see instances where the overindulgence and mistaken spirit of kindness of the parent sows the seed of idleness and engenders such a spirit of dependence as to wholly unfit him for the great struggle that is to follow when thrown entirely upon his own resources. It is a question if the policy of the government in taking care of her Ind an wards is not an illustration of this proposition. Almost from the days of Washington large annuities have been has been taught to depend entirely upon the government for support.

During President Lincoln's administration the writer was United States Indian agent for one of the civilized tribes, the Creeks, and had the larger portion of the loval Indians of the territory to clothe and feed for some years. Although our country was engaged in one of the most fearful internecine were known to history, every want and requirement of the wards of the nation free state citizens, and trying to throw was as carefully provided for as they had been in peace and prosperity. Among the more civilized tribes, the Cherokees and Choctaws, for instance, there are many intelligent, industrious farmers, but I speak of the great bulk of the Indian people. Not one foot of this Oklahoma country is in cultivation, or of use to lease a portion to some of the cattle barons, and it serves as an apple of discord to engender ill-will against them. Of the five civilized tribes the one that has been most exacting in her demands, and loudest in the cry of persecution, is that of the Cherokee, the most civilized of all; and yet this tribe, although recently engaged in a little internecine dustry had won from the soil.

There are many people who have lived the greater portion of their lives in the Cherokee nation who, though not of Indian blood, have intermarried and have arge families and comfortable homes n the nation. A law recently passed by the Cherokee council orders all persons not of Indian blood to leave the country in twenty days. the Indian what a howl of indignation

The law makers of our infant republic little dreamed of the era of process and developement that was so soon to dawn upon a country whose resources and possibilities they knew so little about. When all that country west of the Missouri river was set apart as the home of the red man, the star of empire had not begun her western course, present population of the five civilized and that great commonwealths like tr bes, it would give about 330 acres to Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, etc., were to spring up in these western wilds was not dreamed of in their philosophy, far less that magnificent states teeming with opulence and prosperity, should spring into existence on the then almost undiscovered Pacific coast-states that should exceed in wealth and ve in population with their sister states on the Atlantic seaboard-no more than it was dreamed that the prechase of the small of country at the mouth of the Muskingum by Manasseh Cuttler, for the New England Colony, in our revoutionary days was to be the nucleus from which was to spring such great states as Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, etc. In that early day the lands in the west were comparatively worthless. But little was known of its metes and bounds, and it is little to be wondered at that large and undefined tracts should be given to the red man "as long as water and grass grew." Have paid from year to year, and the Indian | the Indians themselves done anything to bring about this great revolut on, or to enhance the value of these lands?"

What wonderful and magical changes have we all seen in the western march of progress. I remember standing in front of our Constitution half in the village of Topeka, in the territorial days of Kansas, some thirty years ago. when the eloquent and far-seeing governor of the territory, Robert J. Walker, was making an address to the oil on the troubled waters. "There are probably those now living," said see isothermal lines obliterated and peka and bringing the products of the lieve, too, that our children, if not the present generation, will see the iron girdle crossing the Rocky mountains and the rich commerce of the Indias tic seaboard," It is needless to tell order that the Indians might raise to see far more than he foretold fulfillgrain and thus help to provide for their | ed. But I am digressing.

The whole question sums itself up in this: In our anxiety to care for and ly ignore the claims of the white? On the one hand we have a people claima great nation. On the other we have thousands of needy, industrious, woranxious to enter on the land and make it blossom as the rose, and, with indus-

THE BOY

Taken Care Of by His Affectionate Father,

Who Finally Finds Out That It Is No Easy Job to Look After a Live Baby-A Graphic and Very Amusing Account by One Who

There was a man named Dollinger, father of a small boy. The small boy was three years and six months old, and full of the old Harry in proportion. Now it has happened in the past that this man Dollinger had stood much with his nose up in the air and mixture on the floor, and rubbed the boasted how he could take care of the small boy, which latter's name was Willie; and he said that his wife, mother to this Willie, was not posted on taking care of children, and that he himself could manage him without making such a fuss about it. He had laughed at her, and mocked her, and told her his mother had brought up her children differently, and albeit much better. And likewise he added that her raised biscuits went more to the

So in good time it fell out that the woman would go down town for the afternoon. And before this the hired man said it mattered not-that he would take care of the boy. And while the woman was going down the front walk Willie whooped twice like a wild Indian and asked eight questions, for the boy hungered for information.

And while his mother paused at the gate looking at a woman who was riding past, to see whether she had a new hat or her old one made over, little Willie asked a few more questions. And it was so that all of the boy's questions were short, but the answers to them were long and exceedingly difficult.

And it was three hours before the woman returned, but Dollinger thought it was three months, for his offspring made it hot for him.

And it so happened that for the next two minutes after the woman had dragged the cat out from under the stove by the tail and yelled like a man when the returns come right election Very few people have ever estimated night. And his father told him to shut the value of the fuel which feeds the up and keep still, at which the boy price it would bring provided it could began velling like a man with his hand be saved in the form of inch lumber caught in the door of a burglar-proof howling exceedingly loud, till his father For every million feet of lumber was glad to stop his reading and comanswers to his questions; howbeit, he

THE BUSTLE.

How All Paris Is Disturbed Apout the Subject of the Dress-Improver.

Bustles are running into all kinds of whimsical developments, and after seeming to decrease are more aggrivately prominent than ever, says Mrs. Crawford's letter to London Truth. I expect to read in the pious journals a mandement against them by the archbishop of Paris. How is it possible to attend seriously to one's devotions at, say the Madeleine, when one sees on the prie-Dieu chair before one dorsal fantasias thrust into notice by obtrusive bustles? As nothing is now sacred, the most novel tournure is named as a recommendation for Lent wear la tournure aux aites d'ange. In its profile outline the part of the skirt which is made to adapt itself to this centrivance resembles the wings given by painters and sculptors to full-grown angels, with this difference, -- that instead of sprouting from shoulder blades they shoot out from below the waist. It is impossible to think seriously of anything in heaven above or on the earth beneath when one sees a bustle so provokingly nonsensical and piquant.

Like M. Bourget, I sometimes consult great dressmakers on the raison d'etre of sumptuary fancies. One of them, in reply to me anent the bustle, said in substance: "It had its origin away back, seven or eight years ago, at the Theatre du Chatelet when 'Les Mlle et une Nuits' was on there. There were in that extravaganza two princesses whom an old witch had metamorphosed into a pair of turkeys. When re-transformed into their original forms they retained some of the turkey nature, which most showed itself in their bustles. The Princess Bien-Truffee was so comically delicious as to soften the heart of an ill-tempered mysogynist sultan, and get him to dismiss the rest of his seraglio. The the "fiery furnace" as fuel, in the form more questions; and Dollinger fell over Princess Belle-a-voir rivaled with her in the pretty drollery of her get-up. The immediate consequence was a on the Saginaw River cut over 1,000, up so mad that he kicked the cat over struggle between the 'tailor-made' style of corsage, which molded the whole galbe, and the Bien-Truffe or Belle-a-voir tournure. Both were given fair trials, and after a long quered." "You see." continued my priest of fashion, in answer to another question, "the bustle compels attention and, if smartly got up, amuses the eye. I will even say that it creates a prejudice in favor of the wearer, by putting persons of the other sex in good humor with her, however unacquainted they may be with her. One wishes to see her face, and if it is at all nicelooking it makes a conquest. In these high-pressure times we like amusement rather than high æsthetics, and the woman who amuses most carries away the greatest number of admirers. English beauties don't understand this. and hence the success of Paris actresses and New York belles, and still more of American misses from the western states."

A Puzzling Question. Once upon a time a Deadwood juryman, still a prominent citizen of the metropolis, wearied if not nauseated by a buncombe charge by a judge even at that early date under contract to a prominent corporation whose employ he openly entered upon leaving the bench, arose just before retiring and said: "Your honor. I still am a little in doubt on one particular and I fancy viwhether you wish us to return a verdict according to the evidence, or in according with your charge." Since then the two never speak as they pass

The Mystic Circle.

One of the most rapid-growing and prosperous beneficiary societies yet organized, is the Fraternal Mystic Circle, which originated at Columbus, Ohio, about four years ago, and had in December 1000 members and 67 subordinate lodges, called Rulings. Eight of these were in Michigan. Ypsilanti Ruling No. 25 was organized in January, with twenty charter members, and at the last meeting it was decided to admit twenty more on equal terms with the charter members, which only requires a fee of $5. The object of this is to fill up the membership as speedily as possible, and it will of course be taken advantage of by those desiring membership. Seven applications are now pend

Features in this organization which promise to give it exceptional strength and popularity are, the prohibited classes and sections, a reserve fund of 10 per cent, of the assessments to relieve any future heavy assessments, and the payment of a half benefit upon the occurrence of total disability. The prohibited sections are the yellow fever regions of the South, embracing the south Atlantic and Gulf States (except northern Georgia) Arkansas, and the portions of Tennesse and Kentucky west of the Tennessee Riv er; and the prohibited classes are saloon keepers, bar tenders, brewers, distillers. sailors, train men, firemen, policemen miners, and others in hazardous occupations; and benefits are prohibited in case of death or disability in a mob, riot, insurrection or war. As a result there were only three assessments last year, and one

"Oh! those pesky rules! more than a million of them! I just hate arithmetic!" These words were uttered by a youngster on the way home from school. A further remark revealed the fact that examinaion was pending, hence the outburst.

Now, Mr. Editor, why is it that arithme tic is the great stumbling block to the pupil's progress in the public schools?

As it stands now, promotion depends mainly upon the pupil's standing in arithmetic; failure in that debars him from advancing with his class; failure in that often sends him back a grade, even if he is well up in other studies. Then comes discouragement; perhaps he tries the Normal, perhaps he drops out of school entirely.

What is the test of an examination in arithmetic for promotion? Is it the ability to add, subtract, and multiply or livide, as the case may be, with correct ness and facility? Oh, no, it is largely the ability to give abstract definitions, to recite those "pesky rules." As soon as the pupil in the primaries begins to work with figures on slate or blackboard, he must rise and explain the how of each successive step, and that too in the studied language of the bookmaker.

Grade after grade, this explaining, to gether with the giving of rules and defini-tions, is made a leading feature of the laily recitation in arithmetic. As a result of this method of teaching, we find the fifth and sixth grades still counting on his fingers, still stumbling over the simplest of mental questions. Here is an instance:— Patsy (twelve years old) being asked the other day to tell how many pencils could be bought for thirty cents when six cost eighteen, gave the correct answer on the

Lest Patsy be not an average pupil, we put the same question to Joseph Brown. Joseph is a year older than Patsy and has Joseph is a year older than I asy and the been in the public school for six years. He says "six—in—eighteen, six—in—eighteen—three times; why I could buy ten pencils." Right, Joseph must have a be done! Shade of the great Colburn, where art thou? Give Joseph and his comrades in the classroom a few long columns of figures to add, note how slowly they labor through them, and note how many of them fail in getting a correct result. What explains their slowness and inaccuracies? The answer is plain. It is due to their imperfect knowledge of the addition able and the want of drill.

Oh, it is deplorable! burdening the child's memory with so much useless verbiage at the expense of that time which should be given to numerical work and numerical drill; drill on the tables and in the practical use of them, which alone makes the pupil familiar with numbers and the laws that govern them.

Children of ordinary ability, trained in right methods from the age of seven to fourteen, will at the end of that time be able to manipulate figures with surprising able to manipulate lighters with surprising rapidity and accuracy, and with delightful ease; and to them arithmetic will never be a bugbear. Moreover, if at the age of thirteen or fourteen some of them leave school for work (and a large number of the boys do), they have that part of arithmetic to carry with them which will be of real service to them in life.

On the other hand, with the present routine grind in definitions, rules, and explanations, a pupil may worry on through all the technicalities from addition to alligation, and yet fail to secure a common clerkship, because of inaccuracies and want of dispatch in handling figures.

Pertinent to this question are the recent words of Gen. Francis Walker: "If any greater wrong short of a permanent in-ury to health, can be done a child than to end him out into the world to earn his living without the ability to conduct numerical operations accurately and with reasonable rapidity, it is difficult to see in what that injury would consist.'

Bogus Baking Powder Tests.

Rather ingenious but not less fraudulent re the pretended tests of baking powder being made in many of our kitchens by agents who are trying to further the sale of a Chicago article. These so-called tests consist in mixing separately, with water, a sample of the baking powder found in the house and of that carried by the agent. From that found in the hous if a pure article, the bubbles of gas will rise and burst on top like those from a glass of champagne. The Chicago baking powder which they carry, when mixed with water, will show an extra froth upon the top of the mixture which is claimed as evidence of superiority. On the contrary, however, it is not only the exhibit ion of a trick, but is absolute proof tha the baking powder which so acts is adulterated. The chemists have ascertained that the adulterant used is a chemical added for the express purpose of producing this action and deceiving house-keep ers as to the true value of the baking powder. This is not only a dishonest trick, but a dirty one, for the chemical is the product of the filthy refuse of the slaughter house, and if this baking powder is used in the preparation of food passes into the biscuit or cake without change. Of course, any statements made in reference to other baking powders, by parties caught in practising such tricks as these for the purpose of deceiving the public, will be entitled to no credit.

It is probably wisest in the interest of our families, and to prevent our food from being contaminated by tramps of this kind, to turn all persons who wish or attempt to tamper with it unceremoniously from the experience has proved satisfactory, or the official tests have established as pure and

ANMUAL REPORT OF SECRETARY.

The return of this anniversary closes the nineteenth year of our existence as an As sociation. While the report given at this ime may present no striking marks of progress, when compared with former still we feel that there has been a steadily increasing and healthful improve-ment, quite encouraging to the Board of Directors and all who are interested in the welfare of the Library.

There has been during the year twelve regular and two special meetings, with an average attendance of 92-7. Once only here was no quorum. It would be very satisfactory if a larger number of the members were present at every meeting, s the counsel and advice of each is always needed. However, the fine for non-attendance proves in the course of a year quite an addition to our treasury.

Last June was the third time we were given the privilege of providing the Alumabout $115, for which privilege our thanks are due Principal Sill and members of the State Board. We would also express our gratitude to all the friends who so generbusly responded to our solicitations at that time, and to those not members of the Board who so cheerfully lent a helping hand. No other special effort has been made during the year to replenish our treasury, as the ladies do not wish to overax our generous public

The book committee has been allowed the usual amount with which to place new books upon our shelves each quarter, and has given us selections from each department of literature, and a particularly good selection of juvenile works. It was thought best to try the experiment of placing upon our table some one of the magazines of the day, for the benefit and pleasure of those who had some time to spend at the Library, and Littell's Weekly was selected

We are grateful for the receipt of sev eral books, as gifts from individuals, and also a number of volumes of public doc-uments from the State Capitol, and would remember the editors of our city papers, who so kindly favor us as opportunity

Another cause for gratitude is, that none Another cause for grantitude is, that holde of our members have been removed by the hand of death, and that harmony has existed in all the deliberations of the Board, and kindly feelings between it and members of the Association.

Thankful for the past and hopeful for the future, this report is respectfully submitted.
